

(1968) - (1969) Yearbook

PRINCIPAL'S MESSAGE

It is a pleasure for me as Principal of Westview Centennial Secondary School to extend to the editors of this, our first yearbook, the congratulations of the entire school for the success of their efforts. As a result of the efforts of these dedicated students, all of us now possess a book on whose pages are recorded the history of our first two years at Westview. As our memory begins to fade with the passage of time, it will be with nostalgia that we turn to this book to relive in our minds many of today's events.

This year we especially honour the students who will be leaving Westview as our first grade 13 graduating class. To this group may I express my gratitude for a job well done. You have been charged with accepting the role of leadership in a new and young school, and your accomplishments in this regard have been outstanding and will long be remembered. The excellent programs and activities you have started will, in time, become tradition at this school. We also look forward to next year when we can add graduates of our Four Year Science, Technology and Trades Course to the initial list of Westview alumnae.

Man can this day rocket his kind into space and orbit the moon. He can build machines with powers almost beyond our comprehension, and we are now told that he can create life itself within the confines of a laboratory. And yet, in spite of these tremendous scientific and technological advancements taking place each minute of the day, man has still not learned how to get along with his fellow man. Surely, this is the challenge facing each of us today, for it has been said that perhaps the people who soon may bring down on themselves a holocaust are - or will have been - the most educated of all time.

It is an established fact that with each passing year our facilities, our equipment, our methods will change to accommodate the latest trends in education. Along with these changes however, it is imperative that we invest more of our time and effort in an attempt to determine what type of environment is essential, so that a student can develop the characteristics necessary to accept his fellow man - without fear, hate, distrust or prejudice. This will involve more than just paying lip service to the phrase "respect for the rights of others".

If we at Westview could establish this environment at our level - what a bright hope for the future!

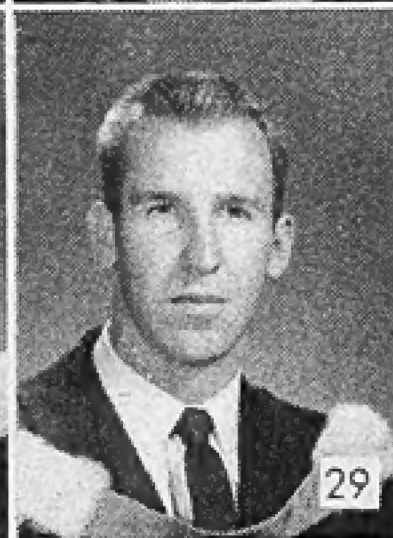

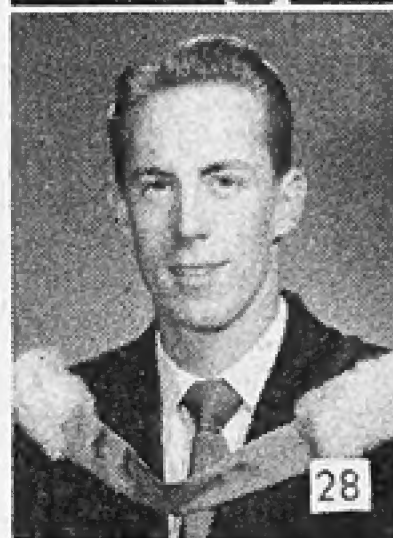

May this first copy of the Westview yearbook be your record of a successful and happy year.

William Roy McCutcheon

July 31, 1929 - July 30th, 2019

Roy McCutcheon worked as a physical education teacher with the North York Board of Education, serving as founding principal at C.W. Jeffreys (1965) and Westview Centennial Secondary Schools (1967).

McCutcheon went to Seneca in 1969 and served as the assistant dean of academic divisions. He served as Seneca's second president from 1984 to 1992.

He wore many hats during a busy life - but the one often overlooked was his musical hat. He had a dance band going at Humberside Collegiate and played a lively sax.
